ABSTRACT

A system for use in controlling and/or testing an underwater hydrocarbon production system, has a number of control modules for controlling well trees. The control modules are provided, not at the trees, but at a control centre for location underwater. The trees are in communication with associated ones of the control modules.